
Introducing justiceworks:

Everyone entering a New York State court should expect to easily obtain information and efficiently move through court proceedings. Court users also should feel confident that court representatives will perform professionally, providing courteous service and accurate information. State and federal laws mandate further guarantees that your experience in the courts is free from bias, discrimination or harassment. Quite simply, the court system's guiding standard of operation is quality justice and service.

To ensure that we meet these priorities, we have developed an information network called Justiceworks.

justiceworks strives to make navigating New York's courts easier by outlining the various resources and services available to court users. All of the Justiceworks resources described in this brochure have been designed to promote and maintain fair treatment and quality service for all those using or working in New York's courts.

This brochure is just one of Justiceworks' informational tools, providing important facts that will help in reporting court-related problems, obtaining assistance with a case or arranging for special court accommodations, such as a court interpreter or an assistive listening device.

For more comprehensive information about the New York State court system, we encourage you to explore our website at www.nycourts.gov.

We hope that these informational tools prove useful to you during your time in the courts.

General Court-Related Information and Assistance

1) The Office of the Chief Clerk

Each court has a Chief Clerk's Office to process case filings and to coordinate court operations. You may contact the Chief Clerk's Office in the court in which you are seeking assistance for general information, including, but not limited to, the following:

- questions about where or how to begin or defend court actions or matters;
- locations of courtrooms or special offices; and
- information about facility access (e.g., access ramps; information in braille; guide dogs, etc.).

2) The Office of the Administrative Judge

Administrative Judges serve in each judicial district and in each New York City court to ensure that the courts operate effectively. They coordinate case operations and monitor case processing.

You may contact the Administrative Judge's Office for general information and assistance, including, but not limited to, the following:

- problems with service (e.g., discourteous court representatives);

- information about possible bias-related or discriminatory conduct or encounters with anyone working for or involved in the courts (also see Special Inspector General for Bias Matters on page 14).

Whether you would like to share a positive court experience or report a problem encounter with a court employee, the local Administrative Judge's Office would like to hear from you. Please refer to the listing on pages 28-30 for Administrative Judges Offices, addresses and telephone numbers.

3) Juror Operations

Each county outside New York City has a Commissioner of Jurors and each New York City borough has a County Clerk, who coordinate juror operations for trial courts. You may direct questions about jury service to these offices. Find out information about these offices through the Chief Clerk's Office, the Administrative Judge's Office, or you may call for information using the juror hotline: 1-800-NYJUROR. (1-800-695-8767)

You may also find access information about jury service through the Internet at www.nyjuror.com.

Foreign Language Interpreting Services

The Unified Court System provides non-English speaking criminal defendants and certain parties in civil matters with interpreters so that they may clearly comprehend and successfully communicate in all court proceedings.

Most courts are staffed with certain foreign language interpreters who are specially screened for competency in interpreting court proceedings.

Foreign language interpreters are available in a range of languages, including, but not limited to:

- Arabic
- Cantonese
- French
- German
- Haitian Creole
- Italian
- Korean
- Mandarin
- Polish
- Russian
- Spanish
- Yiddish
- certain East Indian and African languages

Interpreters for certain languages (e.g., Spanish, Russian, Haitian Creole) may be employed full time. Section 387 of the New York State Judiciary Law provides for the temporary appointment of an interpreter in any court, if the services are necessary.

What if I need a foreign language interpreter?

If you or someone you know requires an interpreter to participate in certain court proceedings, you should contact the Chief Clerk's Office of the court in which you are seeking assistance, the Administrative Judge's Office (see the listing on pages 28-30) or the Court Interpreting Services Office.

For further information, contact the Office by telephone, mail or e-mail:

Court Users with Disabilities

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) of 1990 is a federal law prohibiting discrimination against people with disabilities in employment, public accommodations, and government services. Courts in New York State are covered under Title II of the ADA.

The Unified Court System strives to meet the needs of all New Yorkers. Where possible, facilities are being made accessible to persons with physical and developmental disabilities who enter the courts as litigants, witnesses, victims or defendants.

Who is protected by the ADA?

Title II of the ADA provides that “. . . no qualified individual with a disability shall, by reason of such disability, be excluded from participation in or be denied the benefit of the services, programs, or activities of a public entity, or be subjected to discrimination by any such entity.”

How is disability defined?

A disability is a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of an individual's major life activities, such as caring for oneself, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning and working. An individual is also considered disabled if he or she has a record of a physical and/or mental impairment or is regarded as having such an impairment.

What if I cannot enter the court facility or cannot have access to certain court services due to my disability?

You may need or be entitled to a specific accommodation, service, or resource by virtue of your disability. These might include the following:

- access ramps
- access for service animals
- sign language interpreters
- escorts or audiotapes
- information in braille
- assistive listening devices

How do I find out about or obtain reasonable accommodations and/or special services for my disability?

For assistance in obtaining accommodations for individuals with disabilities who use the courts, you may contact the Chief Clerk's Office of the court in which you are seeking assistance, the Administrative Judges' Office (see the listing on pages 26-28), or the Division of Court Operations (listed below).

You Have a Right to a Bias-Free Courthouse

The New York State Unified Court System is dedicated to providing equal access and fair treatment to all people who use or work in our courts and court-related agencies.

Where can I report problems of bias or discrimination in the courts?

The Office of the Special Inspector General for Bias Matters was established to investigate allegations of bias and discrimination occurring within the courts and court-related agencies.

The Office is staffed by attorneys who are specially trained to investigate and address discrimination and equal employment opportunity matters and to work with court managers to eliminate bias.

The Office has the power to investigate allegations of bias based on race, color, creed, sex (including sexual harassment), sexual orientation, age, marital status, disability, national origin and religion.

Who can file a bias complaint?

Job applicants, court employees, litigants using the courts, witnesses, attorneys, public agency representatives and vendors, and any member of the public may report allegations of bias in the courts to the court system's Special Inspector General for Bias Matters, as long as the subject of the complaint is a court employee, official, or judge.

What can I do if I believe I have been sexually harassed?

Sexual harassment is a recognized form of discrimination. If you believe you have been sexually harassed, you may contact the Office of the Special Inspector General for Bias Matters. The staff will explain the various options available to you, including a formal investigation.

What can I expect after I file a complaint?

All information that you provide will remain confidential to the fullest extent practicable. If the allegation or allegations are substantiated (found valid), corrective action will be taken, which may include special training, mediation, counseling, appropriate disciplinary measures or changes in court procedures or processes.

While the investigation is pending, the Office of the Special Inspector General, when appropriate, may take steps to prevent further problems or encounters with the other party.

Retaliation

Retaliation against bias complaints or witnesses is prohibited. Such retaliation will be treated as seriously as bias activity.

The Office will make every effort to ensure that no retaliatory action is taken against anyone who files a complaint.

New York State Unified Court System

Assistance in Dealing with Court Personnel

Where can I direct questions or problems involving a Unified Court System employee?

Court system employees perform a special role in managing cases while responding to the service needs of court users. As representatives of the courts, they are always obligated to perform professionally and ethically.

Court system supervisors are required to monitor employee performance, to counsel employees to adapt their conduct to appropriate standards, and to recommend the initiation of disciplinary action against employees.

Chief Clerks serve in courts throughout the state to oversee the day-to-day operations of the courts. The most important part of their responsibilities is the supervision of all nonjudicial personnel. Every court has a Chief Clerk.

If you have problems with court employees that you cannot resolve, you may contact the Chief Clerk's Office in the court where the problem arose. You may also contact the Administrative Judge's Office, located in each judicial district and in each New York City court, to report problem encounters with court employees. See pages 26-28 of this brochure for a list of the Administrative Judges' Offices.

What if I believe that I have witnessed or if I know about serious misconduct by court personnel?

You may contact the court system's Inspector General's Office if you have complaints or information about court system personnel that may involve serious infractions of disciplinary standards, criminal activities, conflicts of interest or other misconduct. The Inspector General has the power to investigate employee activity of this nature, as well as to investigate potential illegal activity involving corporations or vendors doing business with the courts.

These investigations may ultimately subject an employee to discipline, including suspension or termination and referral to federal, state, or local law enforcement or regulatory agencies. In contacting the Inspector General's Office, your confidentiality will be preserved to the extent practicable.

Assistance in Dealing with Attorneys

What if I believe that an attorney has violated his or her professional responsibilities, has engaged in some kind of misconduct, or has violated the law?

Each of New York State's four Appellate Divisions operates special committees that review reports of misconduct concerning attorneys admitted to practice in the State.

The committees perform investigations into the facts and circumstances of such allegations and address substantiated misconduct by recommending appropriate penalties that may include suspension from practice.

These committees are located throughout the State to handle complaints, depending on the location of the lawyer's office. The committees are listed below.

To find out where to send your complaint, see the Judicial Departments and Districts Map in the middle of this brochure.

Assistance in Dealing with Judges

Where can I direct questions or problems involving a New York State Judge?

Administrative Judges are the best resource for helping solve problems with judges. They serve in each judicial district and in each New York City court to ensure that the courts operate effectively. They also coordinate case operations and monitor case processing.

You are encouraged to contact the Administrative Judge's Office for assistance in dealing with judges or to report problems involving judges. Administrative Judges are obligated to ensure that judges meet their ethical and professional responsibilities.

To obtain the address and phone number of the Administrative Judge's Office in your borough or court district, please refer to the listing included on page 26-28 of this brochure.

What if I believe that I have witnessed or have knowledge of serious misconduct by a Judge?

You may report allegations of serious misconduct by a judge directly to the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, which is the only body that has the power to take disciplinary action against judges.

The State Commission on Judicial Conduct investigates complaints against New York State judges (including Town and Village Justices), and, where appropriate, may admonish, censure or remove from office judges found guilty of misconduct. Commission staff are obligated to keep reported information as confidential as practicable.

Commitment to Quality Service

Unified Court System personnel are committed to providing quality service to every person who enters the courts.

Accordingly, the New York State Unified Court System has established a statewide program to ensure courteous, professional service at every level.

We depend on your feedback to help us serve you better. We encourage your comments about our services and look forward to hearing about your recent court experience.

How can I comment on service?

Court User Comment Cards are available in the courthouse entry areas or Chief Clerk's Office of the courts. Please take the time to complete and return a card.

You also may share comments about your recent court experience with your Administrative Judge's Office (see the listing on pages 26-28) on the Web at the Quality Service page of the New York State Unified Court System Web site.

In addition, you may contact the Office of Public Affairs. Contact information is given on the facing page.
